The App now be called
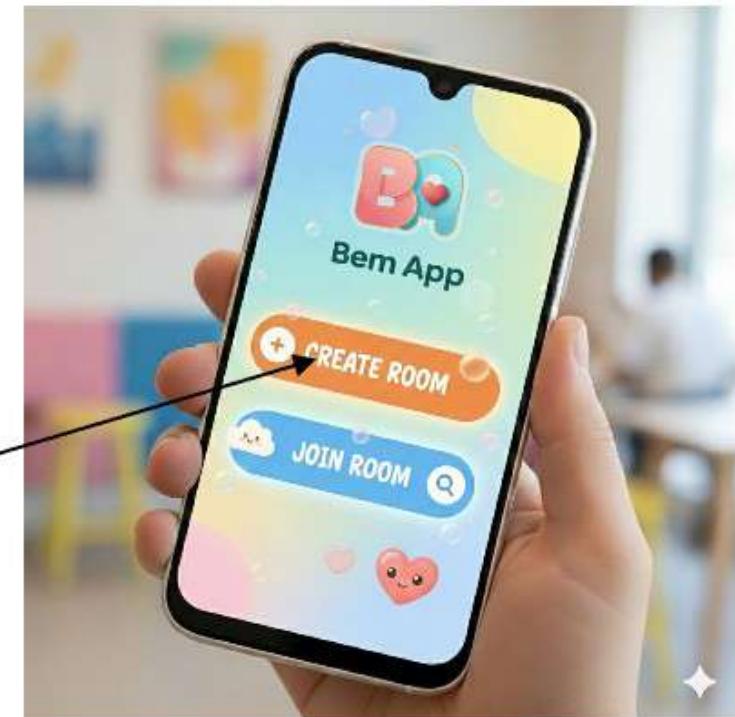

"Bem App"

Above is a potential "Bem App" logo unless you have a better idea or design.
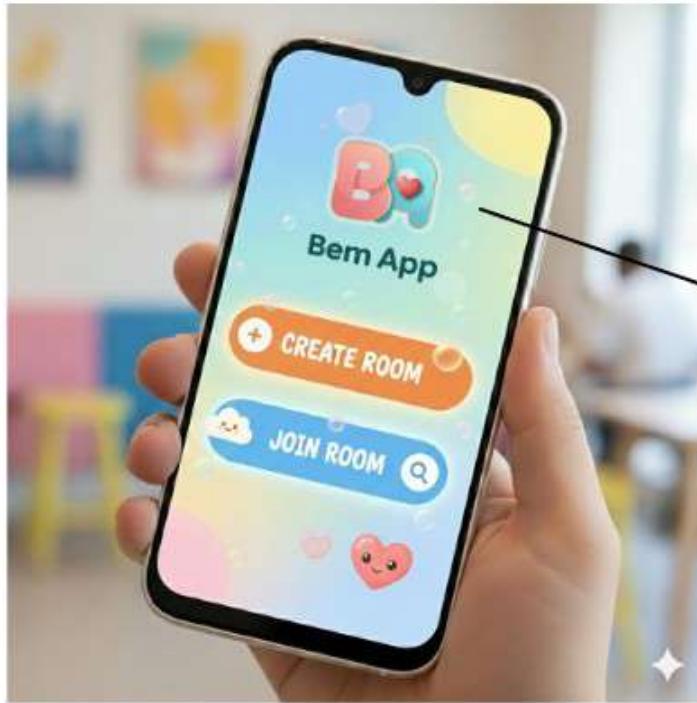

The App logo will show like this in the phone.

Once you click it--

The "Bem App interface will show like this.

Interface does not need to be exact as long as it looks similar to what is shown.

One device will create the room while the other Join in to create a private connection between 2 devices. Ideally, 2 devices should be connected until it will be manually disconnected.

After both devices are connected, Bright red Bubbly button will appear on both devices with a word "Push for Love".
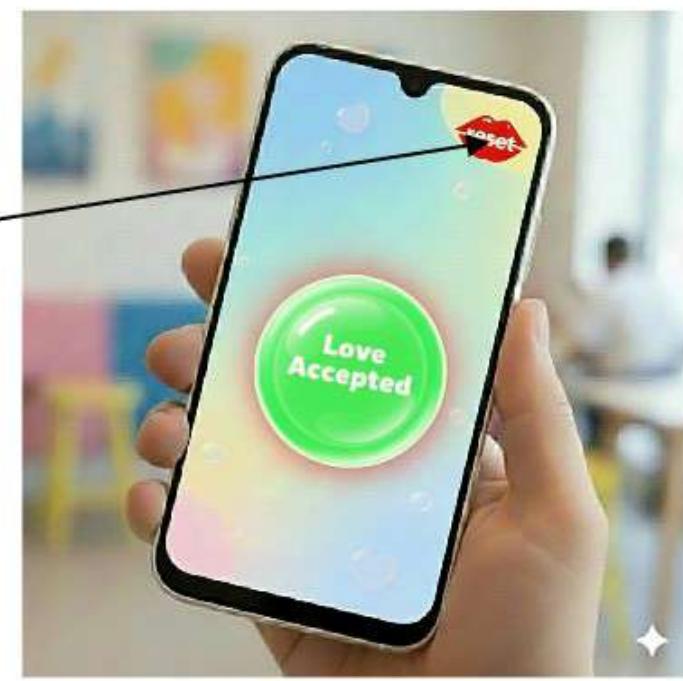

Once one of the devices push the button, a time options will appear (as shown).
It is the time on how long it will last until it will reset back to red button, if the other device will not push the button within the given time.

After selecting the time, a yellow button will appear with a word "Waiting for Love" as shown.
The other device will still shows the Red Button.
(app should still functions even if it is minimized and still be connected with each other.)

Once the other device push the button as well, both devices will show a green button with "Love Accepted" on it as shown. Ideally, the First device should receive a notification that the second device presses the button as well.

A reset button will appear on the top right of the phone if they open the app again and once it is press, both devices will reset and the button will become red again.

Both devices will go back to this interface after it is being reset.

And the cycle continues if they want to use it over and over again as a form of communication button.
